INTRODUCTION

Dear esteemed Philatelist,

We are very proud to present another exciting collection of stamp issues for 2024! We once again celebrate Namibia's great natural heritage, which is an integral part of the global environment. The breakup of Gondwanaland not only formed Namibia's coastline more than 80 million years ago, but culminated in today's continents. Many of the migratory birds that visit Namibia come from far-distant parts of the world, as do the sea turtles in our waters. Enjoy – and help protect – them all!

ETENDEKA PLATEAU OF NAMIBIA

The Etendeka Plateau is a unique geological remnant of the formation of the southern African coastline. The breakup of the supercontinent Gondwanaland resulted in extensive volcanic activity that produced vast basalt landscapes. Today these are home to interesting and diverse fauna and flora.

Migratory birds are astounding aerial voyagers that undertake return journeys of many thousands of kilometres to spend time in Namibia, usually to avoid the harsh winters of the higher latitudes of the northern hemisphere. Dozens of species arrive in substantial numbers soon after the first rains, and depart again in late summer.
