

Dear Valued Customer,

In a country with an impressive megafauna including lions, elephants, giraffes and rhinos, and stunning birdlife from ostriches to kingfishers, small animals are often overlooked. Yet Namibia is home to a multitude of interesting small creatures, many of which are unique to our country.

Sengis are little-known, fascinating mammals that comprise their own scientific order and occur only on the African continent. This stamp issue must be of particular interest to anyone with an interest in Namibia's fauna and flora.

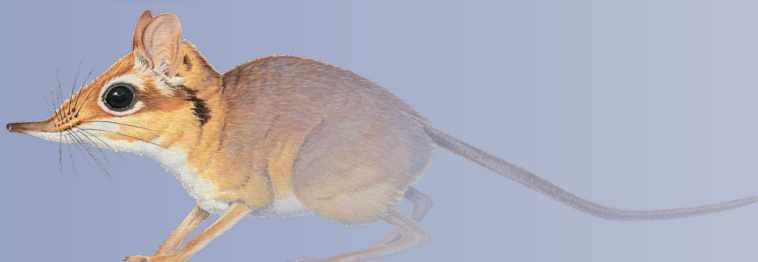

Sincerely,
Bennie Jacobs

Sengis of Namibia

DID YOU KNOW?

The Etendeka round-eared sengi was only described to science in 2014. It has a very localised distribution, occurring only in the stony landscapes of the Etendeka Plateau and its outliers.
